SA FRANCISCO, April 28.—The excursion of President Harrison's marine expedition opened with a fog enveloping the shores of the bay; but as the day wore on the fog lifted and the sun shone brightly in the sunlight. All along the water front numerous decorations which had been placed on the houses and shipping on the day of the president's arrival were still in place and augmented, and many vessels not previously decorated had strings of flags flying from the masts. The harbor of San Francisco, Sausalito, Tiburon and neighboring towns, had also decked their houses and vessels, which did much to enliven the scene. The president's Golden Gate. Out in the stream the cruise Charleston was repaid in her new decorations. There was a great number of objects in the bay. The City of Poughkeepsie, the steamer which was to convey the president's party on the excursion, the steamer Haystack, Red Bank, and the steamer Hattie, all decorated from stem to stern. The steamers Ukiah and Gaviota, and the tugboats, and the harbor boats were filled with people; so that at 10 o'clock of the president's embarkation over 100,000 persons had left the shore to accompany him. The harbor was a scene of stood on the bridge, having a pair of marine binoculars which he passed to the various objects of interest. He then pointed out to him. When the Puebo reached the heads, a strong breeze blowing and the sea was rough. Accordingly at the president's request, the steamer turned back and steamed on smooth water in the vicinity of Sausalito and Angel Island. About 3 o'clock the Puebo landed for the Union Iron works. The steamer, which had been lying in the stream waiting for her passengers, was followed in her wake, making a marine procession several miles in length.

At the Union Iron works the Puebo was received with the blowing of whistles and the waving of flags. The president lying there. The cruiser Charleston which had followed the president's steamer all day, anchored a short distance from the Puebo. The president was taken Charles, being received with a salute when he boarded the vessel, and also when he took his departure. By this time the bay for a mile in every direction from the Union works was studded with vessels of every description, on whose decks there were fully 50,000 people, who had come to witness the launching of the coast defense vessel Monterey.

In addition to those on the vessel there were probably 40,000 people who witnessed the launching from the shore. Every house-top and street and every hillside overlooking the ironworks, as well as the yard itself, were literally covered with people.

At 4:42, Mrs. Harrison pressed the electric button which sent the vessel down the ways. The band played the national air as she slid into the water, and immediately there burst forth the greatest noise from the steam whistles in the locality, to which was added the thundering sound of the Charleston's guns as they fired the national salute. Cheers after cheers also arose from the shore and from

The president and party then returned to the Palace hotel in carriages.

Postmaster General Wanamaker inspected the postoffice, which had been previously decorated in honor of the occasion, and was introduced to the heads of the different departments. A number of postmasters from interior towns were also present. He interviewed the letter carriers and made a short address which was loudly cheered. He then drove to the steamboat and accompanied the rest of the excursion.

THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY

The Expected Strike for Shorter Hours Postponed

COLUMBUS, O., April 28.—The national executive board of the United Mine Workers of America concluded a session of several days this morning and adjourned. The meeting was called to hear statements from the presidents of state miners' orga-

The address states that the miners have arrived at the stage in organization where their last annual convention was an effort to elect a friend of the miners throughout the world. He believed that this great reform, which would be the result of the reform, would be the result of the reform.

Since that time the world had been startled by one of the most awe-inspiring strikes in the annals of their trade. The
